From the Dallas, Texas, News.

The erection of refrigerators at convenient points throughout the South is tending to encourage and assist greatly the hog and hominy policy upon which the prosperity of the people greatly depends. It is much easier to save meat in the North than it is in a warmer or more changeable climate. The drawback to hog raising in some portions of the South has been the uncertainty of the weather encountered frequently at the usual killing time. Packeries obviate all this risk and utilize enough of the porker that formerly went to waste to make up for the cost of cold storage. Improvements along this line have greatly stimulated meat making in the south, and other agencies of encouragement are noted.

The Charleston News and Courier; planting machine. offered valuable prizes for the three most successful hog growers in South Carolina, the contest recently closing for the year. "The contest for the prizes offered to the three most successful hog growers in the State this year," says the News and Courier, "closed at midnight on the 17th instant, last Tuesday, and reports of the weight of these hogs, with other required particulars, are coming in daily by mail from the widely scattered competitors We are glad to receive them-the more the merrier. The importance and value of the contest depends at last not so much on the weight attained for their hogs by the prize winners as on the number of competitors. The more of these the better for themselves and for their neighbors and for the State. Each farm on which a pig has been fed for the competition has been for the time a little experiment station' for the instruction of all the farmers for miles around, and the roly poly, ever-growing object lesson it contained has impressed itself on their minds in a way never to be forgotten, and will be reproduced on many more farms every year for many years to come. The competition in hog growing did not end this week. It has just begun. The contest for the News and Courier prizes was only the first of many. It will be followed by a contest in every county and every district in the State, we hope, and are reasonably sure, every year here-

This species of kindergarten education for grown people can not be too widely extended or too energetically conducted. Precept upon precept elucidated with example upon example in the promotion of industry should be the order of the day through all the rural communities of the south. "The South," says the New York

Morning Advertiser, "must sever the cotton tie, so to speak, which binds it to King Cotton, and cotton more to the hog. There is hope for the south in the hog. The hog is not especially aesthetic, but there is money in him. Money, as we understand it, is what the south wants." The suggestion is blunt and homely, but it is eminently pertinent.

Best Winter Food for Bees.

Too many people have an idea that while only the best honey will do to market, anything that the bees will eat, is good enough for them. The first part of this idea is all right, the second all wrong. Probably the greatest winter danger to bees is from dysentery, and that is usually caused by improper food or a cold hive. Of the two causes, the first is the most common. When the autumn honey flow is limited, and much space remains unfilled, the bees undertake to patch out their stores with the juice of decaying fruits, etc. This is totally unfit for them, says American Gardening, and particularly fatal during the fall and winter, One should be careful, too, what artificial food is given to them in the fall. Save dubious material you want cleaned up till spring, when, if not absolutely poison, it usually will not injure them. Of course nothing questionable may be given them while the sections are on.

The best bee food for winter is pure white honey. That seems to contain the least indigestible matter. Next to this comes pure honey of a darker shade. If artificial food be necessary, use pure granulated sugar syrup. That is the best at any time, but so much of successful wintering depends upon good food, that one should be especially particular in the fall feeding. One may at times have other materials quite as unob jectionable as this, but where one is in doubt, the advice of an experienced apiarist should be sought before using it .-Southern Cultivator.

Proper Care for Horses.

When the horse's stomach ceases to digest one or two things usually takes place-either the food remains unchangable, or it ferments. In the one case the horse is probably foundered; in the other he has colic. It is hard to understand how undigested food diseases the feet, but it does. Colic may be escaped if water is withheld.

Heavy draft horses are much more often subject to colic than light, fast working horses; in fact, the latter are little liable. This is accounted for in the fact that the work horse in long in the harness and comes home eager for his teed, and this is generally given him in great abundance, and it is eaten too fast. The preventative is self suggested.

It is said that there are more blind Tooth Brushes, horses in America than in any other country, and these are found chiefly where they are stabled and highly fed for the purpose of fattening. Blindness seems to bear a sympathetic relation, we thus see, with indigestion. Another serious source is from the bad, unwholesome stables in the cities. As an athlete undergoes training for his work, so with equal care the farm work horses should be groomed and exercised through the winter, that they may be in the finest working condition when the working season arrives. Then they can without strain or injury.

Animals cannot thrive their best when food is given them at any time of day or night which happens to suit the conveni-ence of the feeder, Irregular feeding disturbs and deranges the organs of digestion and assimilation, so that they fail to make the most out of the food supplied. If food is given before its regular time there is overloadings and the organs are put to work before they have recovered from the previous meals, if delayed, the animal is apt to eat too much and too rapidly; there is poor mastication and digestion, DR J B. ALEXANDER'S DRUG STORE. and therefore there is loss and barm.

life which gives a return of profit; so that fullest profit follows judicious feeding .-

Field Experiments with Potatos

made by the New Jersey Agricultural College are, briefly, as follows: The results of recent field experiments with Irish and sweet potatoes are at least suggestive. Manure increases the scab and soil rot. Lime increases the scab, but diminishes the soil rot and tends to make sweet potatoes sound. Kainit diminishes the scab, but insreases the soil rot. Suiphate of copper diminishes both scab and soil rot. Sulphate is all things considered, State of North Carolina - Mecklenburg the best remedy for the scab and soil rot that the experiments suggest.

For the Irish potatoes, it is suggested that the flowers of sulphur, costing two or three cents a pound, be used with the freshly cut seed in the hopper of the

For sweet potatoes the sulphur might be mixed with five times its bulk of fine earth, and a spoonful of the mixture placed in the hill just before setting out the plant.

Small Farms.

Tenants, buy a farm. If you can only get three acres; buy a farm; by all that is sacred in your household; by your wife and helpless babes; by your love of home and hope of future rest, buy you a home, however small it may be. Buy it now while lands are cheap. Do not wait until foreign immigrants come in and purchase all of the surplus acres, when you will have to pay three or four times the present price for a little homestead.

Things will change scon, diversified crops and high price for cotton will soon create a demand for southern lands. Foreign immigration will soon flow to us then in tidal waves. Let every farmer's son mark him out a home and pay for it before he gets married. Let every couple from the rural districts unite two homesteads with their two hearts and thus let the old chival y of the south still dominate the new civilization which is rapidly coming upon us. A county sheriff has become a president in the very recent past. A farm tenant may become a president in the near future. We are all Americans and the pathway to the highen position is open to all.

MANAGING COMPOST HEAPS .- In mana- ROYAL. ging the compost heaps, about which we | WESTR'N ASSURANCE. | English Companies have a good many inquiries at this season it is most important to guard against the judiciously diversified and self-sustaining covered with earth packed down, and protected from the weather. Acid phosphate if mived with the compost, will be found to materially aid in conserving ammonia, but it cannot be used it lime is present. The application of compost is found particularly beneficial where the land is heavy. On light soils, the advantage is not so marked.

The necessity for the economical saving of all our crops, cotton more especially, is becoming more apparent each year, and Office Springs corner, Trade and Tiyon streets mechanical thought and skill are being directed to perfecting the methods by which this may be attained. The roller cotton gin will, no doubt, in time entirely
